DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

Claim 12 is objected to because of the following informalities: the claim depends on itself. For the purpose of examination, claim 12 has been treated as if it depends on claim 11 because only claim 11 provides antecedent basis for the self-centering system recited in claim 12. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Interpretation

The device is claimed as being an oscillatory machine. Applicant's specification page 6 paragraph 68 states, "While the description of the preferred embodiments mainly describes the disc 14 as moving in an orbit, depending on the capabilities of the controller for the supply, i.e. the ability to vary phase relationships and amplitudes of the supply current, the disc 14 can produce any shaped motion within the boundaries of its maximum orbit diameter." This means that depending on the commands for the controller the device may produce oscillating or reciprocating motion or even non-repetitive linear motion. The phrase "oscillatory machine" is therefore viewed to mean a machine capable of oscillatory motion.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as being anticipated by Jacobs 5,126,648.

Jacobs discloses a machine capable of oscillatory motion having a load carrying surface on element 22 in figure 2a with at least two electrically conductive paths 11, 11' as shown in figure 2b and as described in column 5 lines 24 ½ to 29 ½ and column 6 lines 17-21 and a bearing support system as described in column 37 ½ to 45 ½.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jacobs in view of Inagaki et al. 5,836,080. Jacobs discloses the oscillatory device with the bearings but does not disclose at the number of ball roller assemblies used. Inagaki et al. teaches at least three ball groups in column 1 lines 19-24. Since Inagaki et al. and Jacobs are from the same field of endeavor it would have been obvious at the time the invention was made for one of ordinary skill in the art to have utilized at least three ball groups in order to keep the supported plate from tipping.

In regard to claim 3, see Inagaki et al. figure 2A.

Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jacobs in view of Korenaga et al. 6,037,680. Jacobs discloses the oscillatory device but does not disclose having the device return to a known position when the power is turned off. Korenaga et al. teaches a control system where the device returns to a initial state in column 11 lines 16-17. Since Korenaga et al. and Jacobs are from the same field of endeavor it would have been obvious at the time the invention was made for one of ordinary skill in the art to have utilized an initial position for the device in order to simplify the control system. With an initialing control system, there is no need for the device to determine the location of the device each time the power is turned on.
